

I have a problem with being told that I can have my privacy invaded against my will. The no-call policy was the first thing in a long time that allowed me some peace and quite. To be told that this could be taken away is a slap in the face. When does our government start taking care of those private citizens that elect them into office? Can't somebody in the senate say enoughs enough?! I personally do not care to be solicited. Now with internet, there's a million ways to find what I need. I don't need some telemarketer calling and trying to interest me in something I don't need, or want. Please keep the no-call policy in effect, and give me back my sleep!
